Faculty Role in Study Abroad

- Share your study abroad and international experiences with your students
- Invite the Study Abroad Office to classes for a 5 minute presentation
- Include information in blackboard and class announcements
- Encourage students to plan early, attend Study Abroad 101 sessions
- Direct students to opportunities at studyabroad.unt.edu
Affiliate Programs offer students access to research, internships and coursework options that significantly increase their competitiveness for future study and employment.

API Direct Enrollment at the London School of Economics

ISA Euroscholars: Undergraduate research engagement at leading universities

SFS Field Station in Peru for studies of biodiversity and development in the Andes-Amazon

SIT Experiential learning classes, internship on Health, Environment, and Traditional Chinese Medicine in China

USAC Affordable programs in unique locations around the world
Exchange Programs

Exchange Programs better prepare students to contribute to meaningful classroom discussion upon their return.

Support exchange programs developed by your college.

Build Connections with partner institutions for other academic collaboration (research and scholar exchange).

Establish a new exchange agreement with a university abroad. New programs must show significant academic value to UNT students.
